

Abstract

The invention relates to a wood component in which the wood has altered properties in geometrically defined areas. Said geometrically defined areas exclusively comprise the properties of solidified melting wood. The invention also relates to a method for producing such components and to the application of said component.

001250-80860560